I'm always thrilled with the beautiful calligraphy people use to decorate their pages in a magazine. I've been really working on my writing lately, and if you're a beginner be sure to check out my Beginner's Guide to Brush Letters. What I quickly realized was that the secret to the best writing was of course practice, so I did my research and found tons of free resources and print sheets to improve this skill. Before we dive in though, here are some tips and materials to make sure you're ready to come up with your caption. Starting with lettering the basics of the inscription are pretty simple - downstroke thick, upstroke thin. Just so, you can create a brush of calligraphy. It's certainly a little tricky when you start, but as you practice you'll see things get easier. A few basic tips for brushing the inscription are: Hold the pen at a 45 degree angle. It will make sure that you can get thick and thin strokes without damaging the brush. Lift the handle up after each impact. The letter doesn't write, so it's perfectly normal to lift a brush to help you create more promising letters. Hold on. There is no rush, take no time when you email and make sure you put thoughts on your emails. Where to learn Letter Well, of course, I advise you to start with my Brush Letter Guide for Beginners, but here are a few more resources that you might consider.
